CAMPUS NEWS

Dr. Fremont honored at retirement banquet

A banquet to honor Dr. Walter Fremont's retirement as the dean of the School of Education was held Feb. 1. Dr. Fremont reminisced about his 40 years of teaching, which he plans to continue. Tributes were given by Dr. Bob Jones III and Dr. James Deuink, assistant dean of the School of Education. Because of weakening conditions from Lou Gherig's disease, Dr. Fremont will be stepping down from his position of 37 years.

Fremont Fitness Center announced

The university has announced plans to construct a fitness center next to the University Gymnasium. The center, named for Dr. Walter Fremont, retiring dean of the School of Education, will hold enclosed racquetball courts, exercise machines, and separate saunas for men and women. The projected cost for the center is $600,000, and this year's Bible Conference offering helped to pay for the building.

BJU debate team dominates Ohio tournament

The Intercollegiate Debate Team won both first and second place in the novice division at a recent competition held in Columbus, Ohio. They competed against teams from Ball State, Indiana University, John Carroll University and others. Richard Gabbert and Amy Callahan won first place, and Karen Lagger and Paul Calnon won second place.

Edwards wins national piano competition

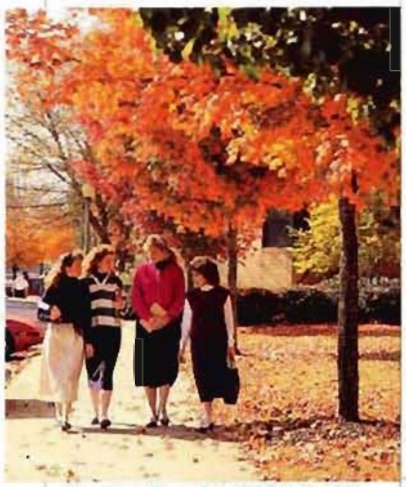
Matt Edwards, a junior piano performance major from Fountain Inn, SC defeated six other divisional finalists to win the piano competition at the Music Teachers' National Association national finals in Little Rock, Arkansas. Some of his winning pieces included First Scherzo in B Minor by Chopin, Prelude in Fugue in G Minor by Bach, and Concerto #3 in C Major by Prokofiev. Edwards is a student of Mr. Laurence Morton.

School of Fine Arts receives string quartet

Nationally acclaimed violin maker John Sipe presented four hand-made instruments to the School of Fine Arts as part of Sipe's "Commemorative Presidential Violin Collection." The collection was made to honor the 41 American presidents, and each of the instruments bears the name of a president. The BJU quartet is made up of the Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren violins, the Grover Cleveland viola, and the William Howard Taft cello.

Academy teams win

The Bob Jones Academy speech, forensics and mock trial teams won various awards in competitions across the Southeast, including the second place overall sweepstakes trophy in the Morristown Invitational Tournament in Morristown, TN, 16 awards in the Stinger Invitational Tournament in Columbia, SC, and eight first place awards in the Fred T. Frog Reames invitational speech tournament in Anderson, SC. The Academy's mock trial team won the SC state competition and travels to the national competition in June.



Come See Us This Fall!

We'd love to have you visit for the High School Festival and the High School Sermon Contest and Worskshop, October 30-November 2. The Festival features competition in art, music, and speech, as well as special clinics and workshops with BJU's expert faculty. The Sermon Contest will benefit Christian young men both spiritually and practically.

Former Ambassador speaks at Bible Conference

Dr. Sam Zakhem, America's former ambassador to the Persian Gulf nation of Bahrain, was a featured speaker at BJU's annual Bible conference, along with his wife, Marilyn. During Dr. Zakhem's years as ambassador, the Gulf was plunged into a bloody conflict between Iran and Iraq, and tiny Bahrain became one of America's most important allies. In his remarks, Dr. Zakhem stressed the importance of his Christian testimony, first as a state representative and senator in Colorado, then as ambassador to a staunchly Muslim nation.

College Financing Tips

by Roy Barton
Director of Financial Affairs

How does $20,000 sound for one year of education? That's about what it takes to get a years' education at an Ivy League school. And other, less prestigious private colleges check in at around $12,000.

Okay, you say, I'll just go to a public college. Sorry, they aren't much better. Over $7,000 a year for room, board and tuition at an out-of-state public college; nearly $5,000 for an in-state public college. Overall, college expenses have been increasing around 8 percent per year, well ahead of the rate of inflation.

So how does BJU stack up compared to "all the rest?" Room, board and tuition here is a little more than $6,000, about one-third that of Ivy League schools and about 50 percent that of most private colleges. And we maintain that rate without the help of government or large foundation grants, on which even many private schools rely.

And the students here can count on the commitment of Dr. Bob Jones, Sr. that the university would do "everything in its power" to help students who are willing to work make it through college. In fact, during the past four years, BJU students have received through the University itself $7,800,000 through grants, loans and work programs. This number is rising even higher through the implementation of two new financial aid programs.

- The 1990-91 school year has been designated "The Year of the Graduate." Any alumnus, or any child of any alumnus, can attend BJU for this coming school year for the cost of tuition the year he or she graduated from BJU, with three stipulations. The alumnus must be a lifetime member of the Alumni Association, and, in the case of the child of an alumnus, he or she must be a dorm student, and entering as a first-time enrollee in BJU on the undergraduate level. For example, since the tuition in 1965 was only $400, you would pay only $400 and save $2,900 over the 1990-91 tuition cost by enrolling as a "Year of the Graduate" student. (Current room and board charges still apply.)

- The "Adopt-a-Student" program is designed to help those students who have exhausted all other means of financial aid, yet still need help to stay in school. Concerned friends of the University can now "adopt" a specific student and help that student with his expenses, in addition to providing support in prayer. As of this writing, over 25 students have been helped with a total of over $13,000.

"I used to think that if you were a Christian, you had to go into 'full-time' Christian work," says Jeff Stoeber, a 1980 BJU grad. "I had no idea that God would call me into the medical field."

After graduating from a public high school, Jeff decided to attend the University of Pennsylvania. But God had other plans for him. "Right when I was supposed to enroll, I got sick. It wasn't any life-threatening illness, but it kept me from registering." Then someone from his church told Jeff about BJU, and he decided to give it a try.

Jeff registered as a business major, but after one semester, he left school. "I had no idea what God wanted me to do with my life," he says. "I was more restricted than I wanted to be, and I said to myself, 'BJU is a great place but it's not for me.'" He returned home and became an apprentice to a butcher for two years. During that time he also got married.

But Jeff was not satisfied with a career as a butcher, so he decided to go back to BJU and major in education. "I thought I was supposed to either be a missionary, a preacher or a Christian school teacher since I was saved, and I knew God didn't want me to be a preacher," Jeff says. "I saw benefits of attending BJU that I hadn't seen before, and I knew God wanted me there.

"As an education major, I had to take some science classes. I loved them but didn't like the education classes. That really made me think. I talked to one of the deans about going into medicine, and he encouraged me to try it if that was the direction that I thought God might be leading me."

Jeff graduated with a pre-med degree in 1980 and applied to medical school. "I did everything perfectly on my applications," Jeff says. "I took lots of time and did everything just right—and then I didn't get accepted by anyone. It was a disappointing time for me."

He then got a job with a pharmaceutical company, and things seemed to be looking up after that. "I thought God had pretty much shut the door as far as medicine was concerned—I had a good job, and I was happy."

For some reason, however, Jeff felt that he should give medical school one more shot. "This time, I just filled out the applications and turned them in—late. Then, I forgot about them."

When he received an acceptance letter, Jeff had mixed feelings. "You'd expect me to be jumping for joy, but I wasn't. I had to make a big decision, one that would affect my family, too, and I didn't know what to do." After talking it over with his wife, Jeff decided that if he received a second acceptance letter, he would go to medical school. A few days later, Jeff received his second letter, so he was off to school again.

And school this time meant four years at medical school in pediatrics and three years of residency in Washington, D.C. "Med school was tough," Jeff says, "but the residency was an endurance test. Sometimes I'd work 100 hours a week and be away from home for up to 48 hours at a time. It was just about as hard on my wife as on me."

Jeff and his family then came to the North Hills Medical Center in Greenville where he works as a pediatrician. "I've always enjoyed kids," Jeff says. "Working in pediatrics is very fulfilling—when I see a child get better, I feel as if I've accomplished something worthwhile. Sometimes I have kids that are terminally ill, but the happy times far outweigh the bad ones."

In addition to working at the medical center, Jeff teaches pediatrics at a local hospital. At his church, Jeff works with the children's prayer meeting, Vacation Bible School and as an usher.

"My life has been an odyssey," Jeff says. "I've stopped looking too far in advance. I like to spend time with my family and take one day, one week, one year at a time. God has led me this far, and I'm trusting Him to continue leading!" ■

BRENT CASTEEL

Ballpark

"Pro baseball is a tough lifestyle for a Christian," says Brent Casteel, a junior from Orlando, Florida. But in Brent's case, it had the unexpected role of preparing him for a ministry.

Before coming to BJU, Brent played baseball for two and a half years in the Chicago Cubs minor league system. He played four different positions, and he played in some pretty elite company. His minor league teammates include current Cubs starting catcher Damon Barryhill, starting first baseman Mark Grace, pitcher Greg Maddux, and starting outfielder Dwight Smith.

"At the beginning of my last year of ball, I decided that I was going to start reading my Bible like I should," Brent says. "It wasn't easy. We'd go on the field at 3:30 and stay until midnight. Then we'd get rested and it would be time for another game.

"But it was amazing; I'd read my Bible in the locker room, and guys would come up to me and start asking questions. Some of them would say, 'You know, I'm saved, but I haven't been living for the Lord.' It wasn't until I started reading my Bible that they started opening up and wanting to talk about being a Christian."

Before he left the team, Brent says he realized that "baseball isn't everything; the Lord is." He went back to Orlando, worked at Disney World for a while, then coached at his old high school for a season.

When school let out, he worked that summer at The Wilds Christian camp in North Carolina to get some experience in dealing with young people. While there, he decided to come to BJU. "I knew all about the University, but I never really thought I would come here. But after being around some BJU students at The Wilds, I thought, 'Well, maybe I can fit in there.'"

In the middle of August, Brent thought that it was probably too late to enroll in BJU, but he decided to try anyway. "It was incredible," he says. "Everything seemed laid out for me. I went to see Dr. Bob Wood about getting a job, and he recommended that I check a local sporting goods store. I talked to the manager and boom—I got a job! It was just like the Lord said, 'Brent, take it.'"

Having already developed his talents on the field, Brent now wants to help others develop theirs. "I know the Lord let me play baseball. I think He gave me the ability to play several positions so I could be a better coach someday." He's now majoring in physical education and plays softball and runs track events for his society's intramural team.

Brent is working this summer at The Wilds of the Rockies, and is hoping to use what he has learned at BJU in his duties there. "I want to use what the Lord has given me to help others live for Him." ■

The Artists Behind the Art

Dave Appleman, who has 25 years of experience in graphic design and typography, has been recognized in Who's Who in American Art. He holds both M.A. and B.A. degrees from BJU and has won several awards, including first awards in competitions in South Carolina and Ohio, and the grand prize in the Darlington Arts Festival in S.C.

Well-known for his life-like stage and costume design for University productions, Harrell Whittington teaches printmaking at BJU. He received both B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University, and has 24 years of experience in his field.

An art history and computer graphics teacher, Michael Slattery received his B.A. and M.A. degrees in art from BJU. He has won several awards, including the Greenville Bragging Exhibition, the La Cuz National Miniature Exhibition, and the South Carolina State Fair.

During Karen Dilley's 12 years of art experience she has won significant awards, including honors at the S.C. Artist Guild Exhibition, the S.C. State Fair, and the Anderson County Arts Council Exhibition. She holds both B.A. and M.A. degrees from Bob Jones University.

Best known for his paintings of rural farm scenes, Darell Koons has studied at BJU, Western Michigan University, Eastern Michigan University, and the University of Michigan. He has participated in the State Department's Art in Embassies program, won awards in numerous competitions including the Guild of S.C. Artists, and has held over 40 one-man exhibitions.

An expert calligrapher and member of the Carolina Calligraphers Guild, Kathy Bell has 20 years experience in her field. She received a B.A. and M.A. from BJU, and has exhibited her work in shows, galleries and collections in locations across the country, including New York and Portland.

With over 30 years' experience in commercial art, BJ grad Jim Brooks teaches illustration and serves as the art director for the school's Publications Department. Awards for his wildlife paintings include winning both the S.C. and N.C. Wildlife Federation's Print of the Year, and his work has appeared in calendars throughout the country.

With 33 years of teaching experience in drawing, painting and sculpture, Carl Blair, who studied at the University of Kansas and the Kansas City Art Institute, has won over 90 state, regional, national awards in art. He was appointed to the S.C. Arts Commission and has been involved in hundreds of group exhibitions in art galleries, museums, and universities. He teaches drawing, painting and sculpture.

Emery Bopp's education has included Yale University, Pratt Institute, the Rochester Institute of Technology and New York University. He has 40 years experience in art and teaching, numerous national, state and regional awards, and has a full-scale model of a deinonychus dinosaur on display at the Peabody Museum of Natural History at Yale University.

THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

One of the surest signs of spiritual rot in the Christian ranks is the readiness of believers to follow after man rather than God. Is that not idolatry? Is that not the spirit of anti-Christ?

Recently, a letter came to my desk from a man, the follower of an errant preacher, and he pledged to follow that preacher regardless of his lacking personal integrity. To him, that preacher had become the standard by which all things were judged. He said "one's penchant toward the Fundamental Left, and points beyond, can be measured quite accurately by one's view of . . . ministry." Needless to say, my reply reminded him that the Word of God alone is the standard by which all things are judged.

All servants of the Lord are imperfect people serving a perfect God. When He ceases to be the measuring rod, and we make men and their accomplishments the standard by which ministry value is judged, we merely reveal how anthropocentric our Christianity has become. Preachers who allow that to happen are as guilty as their cultic following.

God humbled a proud King Nebuchadnezzer by putting him out to pasture to eat grass for seven years with the cows. Religious pride was the original sin that caused Lucifer, who desired to exalt his throne above the throne of God, to be cast from Heaven. The Fundamental ranks need a good bath of Spirit-given humility. God seems to be in the process of bringing that about. If our pride isn't soon repented of, His judgment will hasten.

One day, Rehoboam, king of Judah and son of Solomon, stood face to face with Shemaiah the prophet, who said to God, "Ye have forsaken me, and therefore have I also left you in the hand of Shishak [king of Egypt]. Where upon the princes of Israel and the king humbled themselves; and they said, The Lord is righteous. And when the Lord saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the Lord came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; therefore I will not destroy them. . . ." (II Chronicles 12:5-7)

It is time those who love Christ return glory to Him, Who alone is worthy. It is time Christian ministries are not lauded because of who their leader is but because of their likeness to Christ. It is time Christian educational institutions produced preachers patterned in the likeness of the Lord, not in the likeness of that institution's head. The Lord will share His power but not His glory with any man (Isaiah 42:8).

Like John the Baptist, it is Bob Jones University's purpose that He may increase and we may decrease so that any student preparing his life here may graduate having seen Christ, not man, and delight to serve Him in submission and gladness always.■

Doing library research has just gotten a little easier for BJU students. A new and updated computer system installed at the J.S. Mack Library last fall makes searching for a book a simple matter of pushing a few computer keys.

Students use 12 new terminals to search by author, title, subject or call number—and in a few seconds the computer can tell them whether the book is one of the 176,000 books on-line in the library, where it's located and whether it's available. Students may then print a copy of the information for future reference.

Doing research by computer isn't new for BJU students, but the updated computer system is more "user-friendly" than the old one, students say. "And it's so much faster!" says junior Amy Biggs. "Information that seemed to take forever to get is there almost instantly."

"What's even better is these computers don't beep at you if you give a wrong command like the old system did," senior Randy Cannon says. "And you don't have to key in as much, either."

When the library staff decided their computer system needed updating, they spent many hours researching the alternatives.

"We've seen many answers to prayers," says Mr. Joe Allen, director of library. "The old Burroughs terminals using the LAMBDA system served us well. However, after the merger of Burroughs and Sperry Rand to form UNYSIS, we were left with two separate systems which would not be enhanced or maintained by UNYSIS. We found ourselves with two dead horses on our hands."

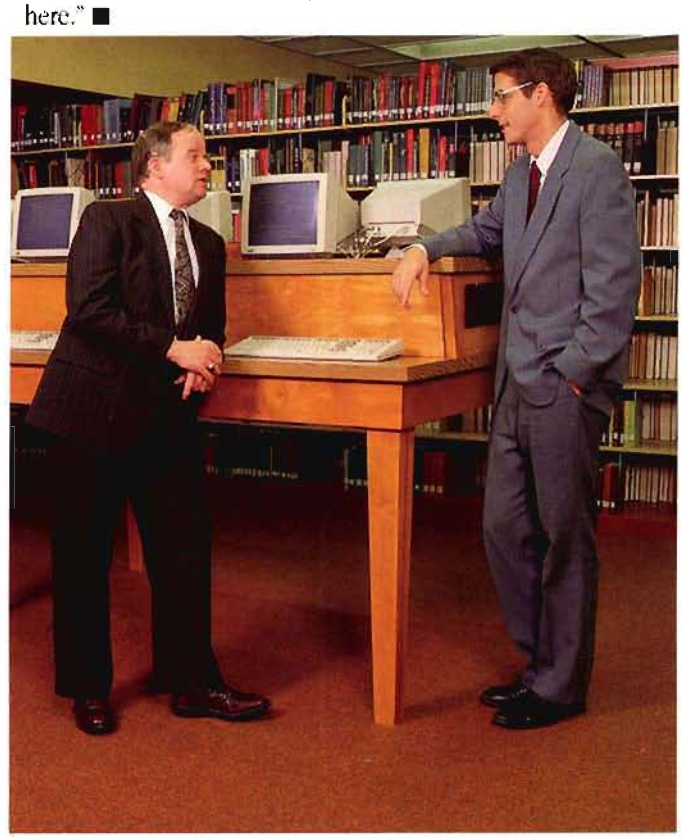
"Once we made the decision to switch to the Data Research Associates system, within four months we were completely operational—circulation, the on-line catalog, technical services, reserve books, everything. That may be a record. Cataloging alone often takes four months, and to become completely operational often requires anywhere from nine months to two years!"

The quick transition period was largely due to a special answer to prayer, Mr. Allen says. "We underestimated the amount of staff time we'd need to give to the new system. I remember praying one night as I was lugging one of the big manuals home to study, 'Lord, you've just got to give us somebody.'" Mike Fox, a 1983 BJU grad, was the answer to that prayer.

"I was a software engineer for Hughes Aircraft, a defense firm in Orange County, Calif. when God called me to preach," Mike says. He returned to BJU in the fall of 1989 to begin work on a Master of Divinity degree just as the library was installing its new program. Mike needed part-time work and the library needed someone with Mike's qualifications. Mike had used the identical Digital computer and the VMS operating system at his previous job, so he was proficient in the more technical program necessary in the library.

"The new system is much easier for us workers to use," says Joanne Milburn, one of the library's work scholarship employees. "We can get the job done quicker, and it's so much easier to teach to the new employees."

"We've improved our efficiency, and since more academic libraries are switching to the same system, we'll be able to network with them more easily," Mr. Allen says. "But our most important goal is to be able to serve the students the Lord has brought here." ■



A Hair-Raising Experience

I chose cosmetology because it was interesting, and I like hands-on work," says Laura Haan, a first year student.

"It takes a lot of work to get down the basics," says Crystal Dodge, a first year student, "but once you learn those, it's a lot of fun."

The purpose for the two-year cosmetology major is to prepare students for the state board exam at the end of the second year. With that accomplished, they can receive their license and pursue a career as a professional. A third year is also offered for those interested in working on an associate degree.

The state board exam is divided into two parts, theory and practical. "Last year we scored 86% in the theory and 97% in the practical," says Mrs. Dondeena Warren, cosmetology coordinator. "We've never had a student have to take the test again, and generally we blow the top out of the numbers."

The reason the students pass with flying colors is because of their thorough training. The teachers check them constantly to make sure they are doing everything the right way. "We want them to be conscientious about their work," Mrs. Warren says.

"We are giving them a well-rounded education, better than what they would receive at just a regular beauty school." Each student gets a liberal arts education in addition to her cosmetology classes. The non-cosmetology classes, such as those in Bible, speech and English, in addition to the experiences of living on a college campus, combine to provide an education more complete than a regular beauty college.

"We tell the girls that this is a mission field, and their ministry begins even while they're here at school," Mrs. Warren says. Unsaved people often come in from town to use the services that the program offers, and the girls have opportunities to witness through their testimonies.

Cosmetology classes include courses such as hair shaping, styling, chemical waving, coloring , manicuring, facials and several other salon-oriented courses. "My favorite part is the manicuring," says Marta Van Beber, a first year student. "It's something different, kind of a break from the routine of cutting and styling hair."

All students agree that the hardest part of the major is the hours. They are required to accumulate 1500 lab hours to be licensed in South Carolina. "On one day we are in class from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., with time off for lunch and supper only," Marta says.

The students get hands-on training from the very beginning. "What I like the best is that we get a chance to work on each other," says Crystal Dodge, a first year student. The girls practice their skills in a spacious salon-type lab that has 20 stations and looks just like a regular beauty shop.

The girls get additional experience when the lab opens two days a week for students, faculty/staff and area residents. Appointments are set up for the students just like a regular salon, and after a while several of them develop "regulars" who really miss the girls when they graduate.

With a campus full of students with hair needs, the cosmetology majors are guaranteed to acquire a lot of experience before they graduate. "It's exciting to watch the girls come not knowing much about hair, and leave really, really good," says Mrs. Susan Payne, a cosmetology teacher.

The graduate success rate looks bright. Several are salon managers within three to six months after they get their first salon job.

"If you like people, I would encourage you to check it out," Laura says. "It's really exciting, and it's something you can always use." ■

9 out of 10

That's the number of freshman students who come back to Bob Jones University for the sophomore year. The reason is simple—student satisfaction.

We keep our promises . . .

We promise young people the highest quality Christian educational experience in the world and we deliver.

We really care . . .

We strive to make our campus a caring, spiritual environment and it is, thanks to a faculty and staff that really care. They go out of their way to make everything that touches the student's life appropriately pleasant and convenient.

We stand for something . . .

We seek to uphold Christian standards of conduct and character, and we do, while at the same time providing a "livable" atmosphere which helps parents sleep better at night and students enjoy a "hassle-free" Christian college experience.

Shouldn't you find out more?

Discover why more than 50,000 students have come to BJU and why 9 out of 10 freshmen come back. Visit us and see what we're really like. Call 1-800-BJ-AND-ME for complete details or for information on any of our more than 100 major programs.
